

May 15, 2020

To all of my current and prospective patients:

As many of you know I truly enjoy my interactions with my patients. As I contemplate how to start seeing acupuncture patients again, I have to carefully balance providing a service and being safe at the same time. Many of you know that I have a full-time medical practice, thus I am at constant risk of exposure. Obviously, I take every precaution to minimize my risk at work, and I monitor my temperature on a regular basis. However, no matter how many prevention strategies that are taken, there is still risk of infection.

Therefore, as I start seeing acupuncture patients again, I will be doing so on a limited basis and taking every precaution to minimize risk to you. Nonetheless, the risk will never be zero. If at any time I feel I cannot keep the risk minimalized, I will again stop seeing patients. MY PROMISE TO YOU is that if at any time I feel ill, or that I might have been exposed, I will not see you. I ALSO ASK OF YOU that if you are ill in any way, or feel you may have had exposure, that you not come to your appointment.

Sincerely,

Michael Kalsman MD